
Leading portal software Intrexx Xtreme now available in England

Companies throughout Europe are increasingly relying on eBusiness solutions to optimise their business processes. Particular interest is focused on enterprise portals, as these combine all data and applications in a single user interface. With Intrexx Xtreme, the German software manufacturer United Planet offers an innovative solution which can be used to create and operate portals and intranet systems quickly. Intrexx Xtreme will be introduced to the industry-savvy audience at the Channel Expo in Birmingham, where its provider will be on the look-out for prospective partners.

Freiburg, 12 May, 2008. With its non-sector specific standard software Intrexx Xtreme, the German software manufacturer United Planet has numbered among Europe's technological leaders in the field of intranet and enterprise portals for years. With the help of numerous ready-made applications, this next-generation portal software facilitates quick and easy development of intranet systems, enterprise portals and web applications. Web services and foreign data from ERP solutions from different manufacturers can be integrated problem-free. As this requires no programming knowledge, which consequently achieves short familiarization times, Intrexx Xtreme offers its users tremendous independence. This has become very important for SMEs; so important, in fact that eight out of ten companies introduced to United Planet's enterprise portal choose it for their business needs. Several thousand companies throughout Europe are already using an Intrexx portal to control their business processes and reaping the benefits with immense cost reduction. United Planet has also won a number of reputable customers in England, showing that there is a big demand for easy-to-use portal software like Intrexx in England.

Intrexx Xtreme standard software and the accompanying services, solutions and training courses are available both directly from United Planet and from more than 100 distribution partners. Since 2000, the manufacturer and its partners have enjoyed major success with the partnership program. This program is now to be expanded to include England. United Planet will take advantage of the Channel Expo to look for English partner companies to help it take the English market by storm. Intrexx Xtreme will make it possible for English software companies to cover growing customer demand for enterprise portals. This should prove very promising for potential partners as to date there are few competitors in the market segment in England. Partners stand to profit not only from the European market leader's years of experience but also from the comprehensive support that United Planet provides its partners.

To make this co-operation even more attractive to potential business partners, United Planet has developed a partnership model in which new English partners pay no fees during the first year. This makes beginning a partnership with United Planet an entirely risk-free opportunity. In addition to this, in June, United Planet is offering its partners free seminars in which they can learn all the ins and outs of Intrexx Xtreme from the ground up.

Axel Wessendorf, CEO of United Planet, is already looking forward to close co-operation with English partners: "The English market is of great interest to us. There are so many SMEs here and we could make their lives easier with Intrexx Xtreme. We are really looking forward to finding new customers and partners with whom we can work together successfully."

United Planet will exhibit at the Channel Expo in Birmingham from 21-22 May, 2008 at stand B30.
